DISMAL APPEARANCE OF THE POLICE COURT

Wilbur Goddin's Latest Scheme Lands Him in Jail for Ninety Days

The Police Court presented a dismal appearance yesterday morning, with its wet, bedraggled crowd.

Richard Henry, colored, was very disorderly on a street car, and when the evidence was presented he was fined $25 and put under security for twelve months.

Garnett Lenz went to the expense of $5 for shooting a pistol in the street.

J. T. Pansley was charged with abusing and threatening Edna A. Gary.

And E. N. Gary hit J. T. Pansley $5 worth, all on account of a neighborly disturbance.

The most interesting case of all was that of Wilbur Goddin. He was a spectator in the court the previous day, when Lucinda Branch was fined for some small offense. She had $2.30 of the amount of her fine, and was put back in the pen until she could get the other thirty cents. Goddin heard the conversation, and conceived a bright idea of getting the money. He went to the pen and told the negro woman that he had arranged to get her out for what she had. She handed it to him, and then he disappeared. When the time came to take the prisoners to jail, Lucinda made Kellams Say Cancer Is Not a Disease to Spread.

The Messrs. Kellam, who purpose building a cancer hospital in the West End have made reply to the objections urged by the County Board of Supervisors. The paper is in part as follows:

"We believe that your misapprehension grows largely out of the fact that you are in error in supposing that cancer, which will be one of the diseases treated in the hospital, is infectious or contagious. As a matter of fact, the best medical authorities agree that cancer cannot be communicated from one body to another. Therefore our hospital could not affect the health of your locality."

"In fact, if our hospital were devoted entirely to the treatment of cancer it would be less harmful to a community from the standpoint of health than any other of the hospitals in the city, all of which very properly accept and treat persons affected with infectious and contagious diseases."

The reply deals further with the subject in the following language:

"While we would dislike to offend the people of any locality, yet we respectfully submit that we and our patients have some rights. The proprietors do not think that they should be subjected to great expense and delay to seek another location, where bandaged faces might be equally offensive. The spot selected was thought to be free from objection as any place could be."

SENT TO THE FARM.

Charles F. Fishburne, of Roanoke, who was sent to the penitentiary for years for the murder of Dr. Fred Lefew, was one yesterday sent to the State farm.

Dr. Charles V. Carrington, the surgeon, said last night that the prisoner was not transferred on account of ill health.

AFTER PLACES ON THE SUPREME COURT

Judge Blackstone a Candidate, and It Is Said All May Be Opposed.

Judge J. W. G. Blackstone, of Accomac, has announced that he will be a candidate for a seat on the Supreme Court bench before the coming Legislature, and following this announcement, which was made a few days ago, comes a persistent rumor from the eastern section of the State that there is a move on foot to bring out candidates against all five of the incumbents.

Just what this means and what forces are behind the alleged move cannot be ascertained, but the subject is being freely discussed among public men, and those who discuss it are disposed to believe there is something in it. The present court is one of the ablest the State has ever had, and its members hold the heavy scales of justice at all times with steady and even hands.

The present judges, with the exception of Judge Whittle, will be on the bench twelve years at the end of the present term, all of them having been chosen by the Legislature of 1893-4. Judge Whittle succeeded Judge Pilegar a few years ago, the latter having been named by Governor Tyler to succeed the late John W. Riley, of Halifax.

MR. ROBERT M'WADE TO PLAY RIP AGAIN

Actor Says He Has Not Done With His Old Role—The Week's Play Bills.

At the Bijou this week is an actor who is famous all over the country for his impersonation of Rip Van Winkle, a character that has only had two exponents who have made it a success—Joseph Jefferson and Robert M'Wade. Mr. M'Wade, who is in the case of "The Street Singer," is the only actor who has ever shared the honors with Mr. Jefferson in the portrayal of the vagabond of the Catskills. For twenty-three consecutive years, Mr. M'Wade played Rip, appearing in every city of the United States and Australia. In New York he played the part under Mr. Daly's management, and won instant recognition in that center of the theatre. Nine years ago Mr. M'Wade, after having played the part longer than Rip Van Winkle slept, and aside the role, since which he has appeared in the original casts of some of the big productions, among them being those of Julia Arthur and Modjeska.

Mr. M'Wade is very well known throughout the South, and has played many engagements at the old Richmond Theatre. He has two sons who follow his profession. One of them is Robert M'Wade, Jr., who plays Simondino, one of the principal roles in Ben Hur, and the other is Edwin M'Wade, actor and dramatist. "Winchester," one of the best war plays of recent years, was the work of Edwin M'Wade. The drama had a successful run, and was very well received in New York.

There is hardly a supervisor of lup who is not a fan of the actor that he has no idea of giving up his old role, but expects to return to the part and play it many times before the end of his stage career.

PLAYING FOR THE ASYLUM.

The negro, Otway Morris, who is in the county jail, and other well known charge of horse stealing, is making a fine play for the insane asylum. He has broken several straight jackets, and seems to relish iron bars for luncheon. If the antics of the negro continue, a commission of lunacy will be held, but in the meantime the guards have little time to read papers or talk politics.
